Casino at Atlantic City Collapses.

MANY ELKS WERE INJURED

The Social Session Was Going On and Hundreds Were Gathered in the Building.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 11.-The social session tendered by Atlantic City lodge to the visiting Elks at the Baltic Avenue Casino last said that only the names of Dr. night ended in a frightful disaster, in which nearly one hundred persons were more or less seriously injured.

The session had just opened, and one of the speakers had been heard, when, without the slightest warning, the building, which had not been used for several years, collapsed, and fully a thousand persons were thrown to the floor beneath. Many women, the wives of the visiting Hearne and wife assign the follow-Elks, went down in the ruins. city's force of 200 firemen and every police officer in the city were called to the scene as a hospital corps. The police ambulance and carriages of every description were utilized to convey the injured to the hospital and to their hotels.

When the police arrived on the scene, the excitement was so intense that they scarcely knew where to begin. An immense crowd of people had been attracted to the place by the noise of the falling building I have ever known, of an effort on and the groans of the unfortunate her part to find the murderer of Mr. who were pinned beneath the bricks Stillwell." and timbers.

Meanwhile physicians were on the scene and were doing everything in their power to aid the unfortunates who had been caught in the crash. As quickly as the unconscious forms of the wounded to take the children into the other were taken out, willing hands bore them to the nearest place, and everything that surgical skill could do to alleviate their sufferings, was done. The excitement amidst the assembled crowds were even greater than that in the immediate neighborhood of the building. All sorts of rumors were rife.

As it had been generally known had been in progress in the building and that it would in all likelihood almost every new arrival upon the and anxiety for some relative or friend. Their fears were, to an extent, quieted, however, when it was learned from a good source, that no lives had been lost.

Munger, ex-may or, and a member of the Hannibal Lime company. Mr. Munger was summoned by the defense. Dr. Hearne and A. L. Clark, Chicago representative of the "Chronicle," have been the only persons present excepting the attorneys, typewriter and reporters.

Hearne and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stillwell attended a card party at his residence on the night of the murder, and that the three took their departure a little before mid-man, came to the witness' house about daybreak the following morning and informed him of the murder. The bedstead had been taken down when he arrived at the Stillwell house. He testified that Dr. Hearne had told him that he (Hearne) accompanied the Stillwells as far as the corner of Fifth and Broadway on their way home, and, leaving them there, went to his office. He said that the names of Dr. J. C. Hearne and Fannie C. Stillwell, now Mrs. J. C. Hearne, had been connected with the murder by intimation in newspaper articles and by general repute among the people of Hannibal. The marriage of Dr. I. C. Hearne and Mrs. Fannie C. Stillwell, the widow, took place in less than a year after the murder.

In cross-examination, the witness Hearne and Mrs. Stillwell had been connected with the murder by inference in the newspaper articles, and that he had never seen the name of R. H. Stillwell, son of the deceased, connected with the murder in that way. He said that Dr. Hearne and Mrs. Hearne were immediately suspected of being connected with the murder, and that R. H. Stillwell had been suspected of obstructing the investigation, and that many persons who suspect Dr. Stillwell from Dr. Hearne previous to Mr. Stillwell's death that had become public talk; the peculiar actions of Mrs. Stillwell following the murder; her receiving of personal unine relief to the community. In reply to a question, the witness said that the undue care for her children on the part of Mrs. Stillwell which he referred to consisted in calling the servants from another room, taking and helping room, having the door locked between herself and the servants, and passing out through the room without showing solicitude as to whether her husband was merely stunned or killed. She did not know his condition until a neighbor returned with her across the street. The witness thought that the natural woman would have seen whether her husthat the social session of the order band was dead or only hurt, as the murderer, according to her testimony, had left the room, and be the largest meeting of the session, neither she nor her children were in any danger. The witness said that scene was almost frantic with grief he had never heard that the widow, as one of the heirs, authorized or requested R. H. THE democratic state committee is called to meet in St. Louis on the call for a meeting in this city on Monday next, at which time a call July 23d. It is not merely a request If Sedalia desires to entertain this meet," but is a request for demosend a strong delegation to the com- ganize for the coming campaign, mittee meeting.

It has just been learned that during May, 1893, the Czar of Russia formally offered to loan the president of the United States any amount of gold that should be needed to maintain the gold reserve in the treasury; that the rate of interest proposed was merely nominal and the time of payment indefinite.

WITH the flattering prospects for a bountiful crop in Central Missouri, and with the marked improvement in commercial and industrial circles, the time is opportune for the building of the long desired north and south railroad. There is a demand for this line and it will pay from the first year of its operation.

THE movement to advertise Missouri's resources in the older and more densely populated states is one in which every real estate owner has an interest. The increased demand for Missouri lands which will certainly follow the proposed movement will materially increase the selling price of every farm and tract of land in the state.

SENATOR F. M. COCKRELL has written to Secretary Groves accepting the invitation to address the to take the unfortunate woman back editors at the convention in this to her home. city on July 23d. Letters have been received from many of the best known editors in the state all heartily endorsing the call for the meeting and promising to be present. Sedalia can get ready to entertain a large number of guests.

The democratic party is not going to be divided on the silver question. Some few of the democrats who are now declaring for gold monometallism will drift into the republican party, but the great majority will be cured of the monarchical gold craze and come back to the doctrine of bimetallism. The democratic party will remain in the future, as it has been in the past, the advocate of honest money, the gold and silver coinage of the constitution, with paper money convertible into coin without loss.

THE democrats of Missouri are patient and conservative and hence have avoided a grave danger to the party organization by complying tempts at social relations.—Nevada with the whimsical terms prescribed Post. by Chairman Maffitt, even to the extent of calling committee meetings in counties where the body of the people had already expressed the sentiments of the county through regularly called county conventions. Any Attempt to Commit the Party to a Gold Standard Will Cause a Split.

Senator George G. Vest sailed from New York on the Westernland for Antwerp yesterday morning, and will remain abroad for his health for several months. to be a practical business measure. When it is fully tried it will yield a much larger revenue, but whether sufficient to meet all of the expenses of the government remains to be not be necessary to increase the revenue by an additional import on beer, spirits or sugar, but that it is a contingency of the future."

The senator is in favor of free silver, and has very decided views on the subject.

"If any attempt to commit the democratic national convention to a single gold standard succeeds it will split the party and cause the nomination of a free silver ticket. The people of the east have no idea of Birds' battery. They play at Cofthe strength of this sentiment in the feyville again today and Taylor will not down until it is settled.

"The silver men do not demand an immediate approval of a free coinage law, and would be contented with a trank, honest expression committing the party to bimet allism and a free use of silver as soon as some practical measure could be formulated and enacted into law. The republicans will probably straddle, as they usually "Missouri is strongly free silver. The democrats will hold a convention in August, and, I believe, it will declare unanimously for free coinage.

"The principal sentiment does not point toward any one in partic ular in the democratic party. Mr. Cleveland will leave office with renown to himself and the country. I do not believe he would accept third term even though it should be offered him, which is unlikely."

HANGED SELF AND BABES.

Deliberate Murder and Suicide by a Despondent Mother.

PITISBURG, Pa., July 11.—Mrs. Emily Roesener, the wife of a tanner living on Robinson road, Allegheny, yesterday hanged herself and two children.

Ever since the birth of her last child, seven months ago, she has been ill and despondent. Several times she threatened to kill herself. Between 4 and 5 o'clock she secured a towel, and, after wetting it so it would not slip, she called her 3-year-old daughter, Ella. Making a noose, she strangled the little one and hanged her by the neck to a bed post.

With a piece of skirt she made another rope and tied it around her 7-year-old babe. The other end she attached to the upright of the baby's cradle, and left the infant in a reclining position, thinking it would fall down and strangle.

Procuring a clothes line, the wo. man made a noose, threw it over her head, and, standing on a chair, tied the rope to a hinge of the closet door. Then she kicked away the chair, and when found she and little Ella were dead. Fate had willed that the baby should live. The little one had turned around until the end of the noose was on a line with its mouth. Taking hold of it, it gnawed at the rope until the latter slipped the noose. When neighbors viewed the ghastly scene the baby was crowing lustily for its bottle. Mr. Roesener is crazed by the shock, and it is feared he will take his life.

PEACE OR WAR.

The World's Progress Toward Arbitration and Disarmament.

Some Brief Extracts from a Notable Speech by Congressman Morse Before the National House of Representatives.

Recently in a debate in the national house of representatives Mr. Bartlett, from the state of New York, had said that nineteen hundred years had passed since the advent of the man of Nazareth, and instead of growing nearer to an universal era of peace, all the energies, all the inventive talent, all the genius of the human mind were now devoted to the manufacture and construction and suggestion of implements of war | Anecdotes Showing Some of His more horrible, more fatal in the power of execution than any which the world has heretofore seen.

Seizing his opportunity Congressman Morse, of Massachusetts, attacked the above speaker's statement. He said he intended to vote for the measure under consideration, but could not subscribe to such a statement as Mr. Bartlett had made. By the statement Mr. Morse said that he understood the gentleman to mean that no progress had been made since the lowly Nazareth was upon earth in the direction of disarmament or settling dismethods.

"Why, Mr. Chairman," said he, "a most wonderful event in the history of the world has just here and now happened. It is only a few days since W. Randal Cremer, a member of the English parliament, appeared bearing a memorial addressed to the government and congress of the United States, and signed by no less Great Britain in framing a treaty to diplomacy fails to adjust.

"Why, Mr. Chairman, only the other evening I attended a meeting in Convention hall in this city, which seats eight thousand persons, and in that monstrous hall, festooned from its domes and arches, was exhibited a monstrous petition, the like of which was never seen on the face of the earth, five miles long, and signed by one million one hundred and fifty thousand persons, and further signed by officers of societies representing a grand total of | News. seven million signatures, from citizens not only of this country and England, but of Burmah, Ceylon, Australia, Denmark, China, India, Mexico, Alaska, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, Belgium, Holland, Sweden, Spain, Uruguay, Brazil, Japan, Corea, Egypt, Finland, Russia, Turkey, Hawaii, Siam and other nations and peoples speaking no less than fifty languages and dialects.

"What does this monster petition pray for? It prays the legislators, monarchs and rulers of the earth to suppress the drink and opium traffic. Does this great movement, championed in England by Lady Henry that queen of American women, Miss Frances Willard, and known as the time to time examples of his work, white-ribbon movement, which has circled the world in its errand of native place. I was often surprised, love, mean nothing?

"I say, does this argue nothing in favor of disarmament and the ushering in of that glorious day so long predicted in God's Word, when men shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, and when nation shall not lift up sword against nation nor learn war any more. I am one of those who believe that the world is growing better. There never were upon the face of the earth so many good men and women as now. Never was the disposition so strong to settle national disputes by arbitration as "Mr. Chairman, methinks I behold the sun of victory; methinks that I behold the dawn of a better understanding among the family of nations, the dawn of peace and arbitration, in place of bloodshed and cruel war.

"And I firmly believe that we have seen the last appeal to arbitration by the sword among Englishspeaking people."

STORIES OF THE NEW CZAR.

Characteristics. The young czar seems to be doing his best to make himself personally acquainted with his new subjects in a way little practiced by any other emperor of Russia since the reign of Peter the Great. He walks daily along the streets of St. Petersburg, generally quite unattended, and as he is seldom recognized he meets now and then with little adventures which cause him much amusement. During one of his promenades he saw a youth selling for thirty kopecks most terribly unflattering pictures of himself, which so deputes among nations by peaceful lighted him that he immediately bought one and gave it to Princess Alix, with the remark: "It cannot be so very like, as no one recognized me when I bought it." Nevertheless the work of art was put in a place of honor in the Anitschkow palace.

On another occasion as he was drivin this capital city of the nation | ing slowly along the Nevski a man attempted to throw a letter into the carriage, but missed his aim and the petition fell under the wheels. > It is much commented upon in court circles that so far as the czar has refused to accede to the oftenrepeated wish of Grand Duke Michael Nikolajewidsch and raise himself to the rank of general, though the whole court would be delighted to see him in the becoming and glittering uniform. The reason he gives is that he prefers to retain the grade of colonel, which was bestowed on him by his late father.—Washington

Teaching Art in France.

Primary schools in France give pupils an elementary acquaintance with art, which creates a demand later on for some kind of graphic supplement to the legends and facts of history that they have absorbed at school. Then, too, local pride tends to foster the art instinct there as perhaps in no other country. A youth in any distant department or unimportant French town who shows a peculiar aptitude for drawing and painting is often encouraged and aided by a public purse to continue he cultivation of his gifts in the art schools in Paais. As records of his Somerset, and in this country by progress there and in recognition of this assistance, he sends home from which become the property of his when first living in France, to come across paintings of superior quality in the museums of comparatively insignificant towns, and it was only after a prolonged sojourn there that I learned the source of these unusual acquisitions. They proved to be oftentimes the productions of a local genius who, on the road to fame, had acknowledged municipal benefactions by perhaps a "success" from the salon, or the customary contribution expected of him by the authorities. Might we not here in our own country follow some such course with profit?--Forum.

COLLECTION OF STAMPS. The United States Trying Secure a

Specimen of Every Issue. The post office department has begun the collection of stamps of all the foreign countries of the world, as well as those of the United States. Capt. Brooks, superintendent of the foreign mail service, has two large stamp albums, containing places for every stamp issued, and makes requests of the various nations for a set of their stamps or specimens.

There are in all about 15,000 stamps issued, and up to date about 7,000 have been secured. A great difficulty in securing a complete set arises from the fact that certain principalities of Europe, now included in the domains of nations, continue the use of their individual stamps. For instance, says a Washington correspondent of the New York Times, Wurtemberg and Baden, in Germany, use the same stamps they did when governed by in the principalities named and are not good even over the rest of Germany. This fact causes much confusion, and extra expense to tourists traveling on the continent. If an American in Wurtemberg buys a stamp of that principality and mails it in Berlin, or even Wurtemberg, to anyone in America, the letter reaches its destination, but an extra charge of 10 cents is made before

A dozen years ago each department of the United States had a distinct issue of stamps, which, since the use of the penalty frank on envelopes, have to all appearances gone completely out of existence. Those that have not been destroyed have found their way in the hands of stamp dealers and stamp collectors. There are but few complete sets

THE COLLECTING MANIA. Just Now the Contemporary Poster is the Chief Attraction.

Anyone who has ever suffered at any time from the mania for collecting it to himself. Calling the sup- ing, in any of its forms, must feel it "The settlement by arbitration of plicant to the side of the carriage in these days a constant tax upon his powers of self-restraint to keep his hands off of the contemporary poster. The posters in particular with which some of the publishers announce the new numbers of magazines, and sometimes new books, are a constant temptation. Anyone who has ever collected anything must feel that they are too fascinating to be neglected, and that not to gather them as they appear is a neglect of opportunity that is almost criminal.

For the solace of persons who have this impulse and refuse to yield to it, it is a pleasure to point out that, after all, the collector is a slave to his hobby, and the more things he collects the more masters he puts over himself. To be able to see pretty things, and not to be bitten with the desire to take them home and salt them down, even when they can be had for the asking, is an attainment which promises to be quite as valuble for its rarity as most of the things that ordinary collectors acquire. When we see the awful length to which the postage-stamp mania has gone, and the prodigious accumulations of photographs which overwhelm most contemporary families, we may surely justify ourselves in some stiffening of our resolution not to drift into the habit of hoarding even pretty things that we do not really want. It is so easy to begin collecting, and so unsatisfactory to stop after one has once started! Let us be stiff-necked-some of us, at least—and maintain that not to be a collector is a distinction, just as it is not to have had one's picture in the newspapers.—Harper's Weekly.

AN ARTIST'S MEASUREMENTS. What He Considers a Perfect Model of the Female Form.

An artist is authority for the following measurements, which he claims are necessary for a perfect model of physical beauty of the female form: "To meet the requirements of a classic figure," he says, a woman should be "five feet four and three-quarter inches tall, thirty-two inches bust measure, twenty-four inches around the waist, nine inches from armpit to waist, long arms and neck." A queenly woman, however, must be "five feet five inches tall, thirty-six inches bust, twenty-six and a half inches waist, thirty-five inches over the hips, eleven and a half inches around the ball of the arm, six and a half inches around STEAM CARPET CLEANING. the wrist, hands and feet not too small."

A similar authority lays down the rule that no colors should be worn save those which have a duplicate in the hair, eyes or complexion, and he claims that a woman with blue-gray eyes and a thin, neutral-tinted complexion never looks so well as when dressed in blue shades which are mixed with gray. A brunette should wear cream color, as this produces contain a hint of pink, and so har- Mo. monize well with the face in which there is a good deal of color.-Harper's Bazar.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Actual Result Is the Most Convincing Evidence-Read What the Patients Say.

The physicians and surgeons of the World Medical Institute have stood the test and were taxed to their full capacity to attend to the large number who have called to avail themselves of the free month's treatment to each actual patient commencing a course.

Owing to the fact that many were inable to see the physicians and commence a course during the last so, claiming that they should have an equal opportunity; and, wishing to treat all alike, the physicians in charge of this office have decided their grand dukes. These pass only to extend the offer for a limited time, reserving the right, however, to discontinue whenever the capacw of the physicians are unequal to attend and give careful attention to each case.

What They Say.

Mrs. T. Hulin, Butler, Mo., says: "I could not walk for ten years from omplication of Nerve, Stomach, Liver and Female Troubles, for which I could get no relief. In three months' time the physicians of the World Medical Institute, at Kansas City, Mo., had me taking long walks, and I mproved steadily under their advice until now I am well and strong again. I can recommend these physicians as competent and honorable doctors, who will do what hey promise their patients."

John W. Green, the well known stock buyer at Rosedale, Kan., says: "My entire nervous system had been a wreck for ten years. I was melancholy, could not remember things, and felt that I had entirely lost my usefulness as a man among men. In just five months the physicians of the World Medical Institute had me as well as I ever was in my life."

Leaving the town of Birch Tree the water in its mad rush down the valley swept away crops, fences and everything in its course for a distance of 18 miles, leaving only ruin in its pathway.

At this point the town of Winona was reached, where the scenes of destruction and death are awful to describe. Commencing on the west side of town, it struck the residence of Tom Talbart, which was totally destroyed, his household goods swept away, the family barely escaping with their lives.

Next the residence of Jack Chilton was dashed to pieces, and his household effects went down the stream. He and his family were saved. Then came the residence of Widow Crawford, which was totally destroyed and herself and daughter drowned.

The residences of Widow Patterson, Marion Odle, Joe Miller, Thos. Holmes, Thos. Galbraith and City Marshal Jones, were swept away and are a total loss.

Widow Embeck's house was moved from its foundation and her household goods badly damaged. George Jordan also lost his household goods.

her. One ball took effect just under the left ear and the other in the left side of the abdomen.

Mrs. Chamberlain fell, mortally wounded. Glancing at his wife writhing in agony, he turned the muzzle of the revolver toward his head and pulled the trigger. The bullet crashed into his brain and caused instant death. Mrs. Chamberlain died this afternoon without regaining consciousness.

The claim is made that Mrs. Chamberlain had no cause for suspecting her husband, basing her charges on an anonymous letter. He declared after the whipping that he would kill her at the first opportunity, and carried out his threat.

"We had an epidemic of dysentery in this vicinity last summer," says Samuel S. Pollock, of Briceland, Cal. "I was taken with it and suffered severely until some one called my attention to Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhæa remedy. I procured a bottle and felt better after the first dose. The your wife to cook and then comresidence of Widow Crawford, Rev. plain with her because she has not G. W. Duncan's daughter, was also made it tender, when you can destroyed. She and her daughter buy meat that is already tender, made so by the cold storage process? We hold all our meat in cold storage until they become tender and juicy before we send it out. There is no use of any one in Sedalia having any difficulty with tough meat, for we can furnish you with something you will appreciate and you will have a meal you will enjoy. All we ask of you is to give us a trial, and you will fall right into line with the balance and buy your meat where you can get something fit to eat. We make a specialty of prime roast beef, and we guarantee every one of our roasts to be tender and juicy.

The reason our meats are so much better than you get elsewhere is because we have the largest cold storage, by half, than any two other markets in the city, and we can hold our meats long enough so they become tender. Any one who knows anything about meats knows what cold storage will do for it. It takes all the old hard tough substance from it and gives it a nice tender and juicy flavor. The old fogy way of butchering a beef tonight and selling it out tomorrow, like it is being done by others, is why your meat is tough.

Leave word at our market and we will call at your house daily and get your orders, or telephone 120. NEWTON MEAT CG.

SENATOR VEST GONE.

He Sailed from New York Yesterday Morning.

HE MAKES A PREDICTION.

Any Attempt to Commit the Party to a Gold Standard Will Cause a Split.

Senator George G. Vest sailed from New York on the Westernland for Antwerp yesterday morning, and will remain abroad for his health for morning, close the deal and pay several months. Senator Vest had over the cash. just come from a journey through the western cereal producing states, and he said that he had never seen crops generally in such good condition and everything so favorable for a At any rate he failed to come to harvest far above the average in time and 11 o'clock the two conquantity and quality.

The horse had not be necessary to increase the revenue by an additional import on beer, spirits or sugar, but that it is a dle. contingency of the future."

The senator is in favor of free silver, and has very decided views on the subject.

"If any attempt to commit the democratic national convention to a single gold standard succeeds it will split the party and cause the nomiwestern and southern states. It will be the main issue in 1896. The question must be settled, and it will not down until it is settled.

A Cloudburst in Shannon County Does Incalculable Damage-Sufferers Appeal for Aid.

Special to the DEMOCRAT.

Springfield, Mo., July 6.—The following message, carrying tidings of death and disaster, was received Did Mrs. Cummins Poison Her Hus here this morning from Winona:

Last night a very heavy cloudburst occurred here which caused an awful flood. Thirty homes were washed away. Seven bodies have been recovered and still more are missing. We want help in the way of money, clothing, food or anything we can get.

The following parties are known to be drowned, as their bodies have been recovered:

Rev. Duncan, wife and little daughter; Mr. and Mrs. Nevins and little daughter; Mary Cannon and John Morris. It is impossible to estimate the financial loss. All crops along Current river are destroyed.

(Signed) B. F. Evans, Mayor. No further particulars obtainable.

Winona was the principal town in Shannon county, both 'as to business and population. The Current river flows eight miles west of the town to the northeast and then bends southward and runs to the railroad at Chicopec, twelve miles east of here.

The houses of those who suffered were along the railroad, which passes for a time through a ravine. When the cloudburst came the waters plunged down the ravine from mountains near by, carrying death and devastation and leaving no time for the people to seek shelter. Houses went down in the torrent like toy ships.

LINNEUS, Mo., June 6.—Although the examination of witnesses in the Cummins inquest was concluded last night, the jury has not yet returned a verdict. It is waiting on the chemical analysis of Cummins' stomach, lungs and brain.

The evidence indicates that Mrs. Cummins had made two previous attempts on her husband's life, and Dr. Lane says Cummins died from chloroform.

It is said that a relative of Mrs. Cummins furnished the money which paid for the joint insurance policy.

A BAD START.

The "Sound Money Club's" First Break a Bad One.

A number of St. Louis gentlemen, with Edward Kehr as president and George R. Lockwood as secretary, have organized a "sound money club" and issued its first "address"

In this address the club is frank enough to come out squarely for gold monometallism and to discard the straddle with which the gold advocates have heretofore deceived the people, and says:

"With all due respect for honestly mistaken men, it may be asserted that all the talk for a remonetization of silver is being ulars call on or address, indulged in by people who conceive of the great coin question vaguely, as something that will put money in their purses by congressional enactment. The free silverites are, as a rule, the men who have been most D. A. Mayer, cashier of the political "isms" of the last 20 years."

monetary issue." The average reader will naturally inquire why the necessity for a "sound money club" and the tons of gold literature, if the "free silver mania seems to have about run itscourse." If the members believe this, why do they organize at this late day to fight a corpse? Why did they not get together in 1892 or 1894 or ten years sooner, when democrats were spreading this craze as

It tends to show what this "sound money club" would do if it had the power, and will make conservative men think twice about countenancing an organization which boldly exults at the spectacle of forcing borrowers to become the political slaves of lenders.

The writer of the address evidently did not understand that many of the largest lenders in the country are advocates of silver

How Col. Van Wisker Came to Overcharge.

THE EXPLANATION MADE

The Colonel, Through His Son, Tells How the Discrepancy Occurred -Will Refund the Money.

Col. Van B. Wisker, in last Saturday's issue of the Enterprise-Sentinel, devoted nearly two columns to explaining his alleged overcharge in his hotel bill while in St. Louis in the interest of "Missouri on Wheels."

He says while he did not pay the Leclede hotel $12, his legitimate expenses while in St. Louis aggregated that figure, as he took meals at other than the Leclede and also complimented the representatives of the St. Louis press by the purchase for them of soda water, phosphate and lunch.

his office Monday by a DEMOCRAT reporter and asked if he cared to say anything in regard to Mayor Hastain's latest charge.

"Well, I can't, say that I do," answered the colonel. "My son, gone home now to get the mileage books and some papers. When he returns he will explain."

The son was seen later and said: "It is my fault entirely that a mistake was made in rendering the bill, and I teel keenly grieved because I have been the cause of father being blackguarded by a scrub like Hastain.

"When father returned from his me and I put it in the safe. A few days later I went to charge him for the mileage used, but instead of the ber. In politics he was a partisan right book I got an M., K. & T. book of 1894 and figured up from it what had been used and made the charge accordingly. It was a ridiculous mistake to make, and I deeply regret it.

"I am writing a letter to Mr. Moses, president of the Board of Trade, explaining the matter to him, and will send him a check for the difference between the 1,010 miles charged and the 537 actually traveled by father, instead of 546, as figured up by Hastain. This is all there is to it."

The DEMOCRAT has now presented both sides of the case, and its readers can form their own conclusions.

MISS DEMAR'S STORY.

I am Miss Demar's maid. I have been with her now for a long time, ever since I went to the seashore with old Mrs. Ray.

I didn't tell you she was handsome, did I? Well, I didn't know it myself at first, for she had none of that flush and animation that makes you think men and women handsome when they are not. But her face was just like one cut out of cameo, with all the lines smooth and graceful. Her skin was dark, but fine and shining like satin, and her eyes were steel blue, steady and bright, with curled black lashes and wide brows. I remember that she wore black and white, with pink coral ornaments, a great deal, and she was very fond of roses in her hair.

Sometimes she would seem to think much of these things, and then she would be quite indifferent, nor mind what I put her in, in the least. Absent and sorrowful like she would be. And she would have these spells often when there were gay gentlemen in love with her, as was plain to be seen. How she managed it, or why it was, I never could see, but she never encouraged any of her ad-

She was fond of the place—of the beach and the rocks and the sea. There was a place called Red Cliff that she was foud of ascending; the waters washed its base and swept away, so wild and free. She used often to take me with her, "to take care of her," she said; for she was apt to grow absent-minded in such places, and to come away and forget a shawl or book or glove, and once she came near being cut off from the shore by the tide.

The hotel was the only house in sight, except a stone one which stood upon the rocks, a mile up the beach, with three cedar trees before it. I've heard something about the master

Miss Demar was fond of the beach while there were few persons upon Cliff quite early in the morning. One morning, as she sat there, she commenced singing an old song.

I recall the old song very well, and she sang it very low and sweet. But it frightened me half out of my wits to see that there was a man seated just below us on the cliff, and that he turned and looked at her. He was a large man, with a beard half gray, and would have been very handsome but for a scar from his temple to his

She did not see him at all, and I was afraid of terrifying her too much. It was such a lonesome spot, you see. But pretty soon he got up and went down the cliff; and when he was below on the sands she spied him.

"Clotilde, who is that?" she said, wonderingly.

"I don't know, Miss Demar, but I fancy it must be the master of the Cedars—a lone kind of man, who lives there with one servant."

Her mind seemed to wander again, and I was very glad, for it gave me a disagreeable feeling to see how he looked at her-not flerce or evil like. but with his eyes dilated, and his lips twitching, so that it was quite startling to see him. I dreamed of him that night, and resolved that in the morning I would beg Miss Demar never to go about the beach alone.

The next day was rainy, and she did not go out, but sat all the morning in her room with an old letter in her hand. The sheet was quite yellow and there was a little picture of ivory on it, I saw, for she laid it down at last, and, wrapping a shawl about her, went out on the long, covered porch to walk, as she sometimes did when a kind of restlessness seemed to possess her. I peeped -I could not help it-I was so curious to see that picture.

I just caught a glimpse of a handsome man with blue eyes and a blonde beard, and then the words of the letter caught my eye, for it was written as clear as print, and one might have read it running:

"Since my accident I am horribly disfigured. I give you up. Tie your blooming life to the sickly wreck of mine, Elinor, my beautiful one! Farewell! God bless and keep you!

I caught sight of these words here and there, for Miss Demar was just across the hall, and likely to come in any instant; and it was very wrong of me, anyway, to be peeping at her secrets, and she was so good to me! But curiosity causes many a wicked sin, sir.

Having found out so much, I broke away from the temptation and ran devnstairs, sorry to know what I did, since I'd no right to it, and yet satisfied in my mind why Mr. Al- falo Express. cester got such cool bows, and why she never would drive out with Col. Grafton. When I went up to dress her for dinner I saw that she had been crying, and yet she danced that night till twelve o'clock.

that there came a cold, rainy time, and the people at the Surf house were thrown more together and got more familiar; and Mr. Alcester and Col. Grafton both offered themselves to Miss Demar and were refused. She was playing upon the piano talking and walking with Mr. Rav upon the long porch, just outside the window, and she saw, as I did, the queer figure of an old Frenchman in a velvet coat come running across the sands and up the hotel steps. Mr. Ray went to meet him.

"What is it, Varai?" he said. Miss Demar started from her seat and went to the door.

"Some help, monsieur. M. Auxerre lies very ill-he has the fever. I leave him all alone while I come to you. Will you bring one doctor to us? M. Auxerre is near to deathvery, very ill!"

The little old Frenchman was the picture of distress. To my surprise Miss Demar pushed through the gentlemen and laid her hand upon

"Varai, where is your master?" "Mon Dieu, Miss Elinor!" he

"Hushl Where is M. Auxerre?" "At the Cedars," he answered, shivering as though he had seen a ghost.

She flew up to her room, I following. She began hunting for her cloak. I found it for her, and then she bade me take a shawl and come with her.

It had begun to rain in torrents, but away we went across the sands, her movements like lightning, her cheeks in a fever. The rain drenched us, the surf hissed at us, the darkness closed heavily around us, but she led the way straight to the door of the Cedars.

She pushed open the door. A monstrous hound rose from the mat in the hall and gave voice.

"Mogul, Mogul," she said, gently, and gave him her hand to smell of. He licked her fingers and then led the way to a closed inner door. Miss Demar softly opened it.

The room was a sort of study, full of books and chemical apparatus; but there was a couch in it, a man lying, with closed eyes, upon the pillows. Trembling very much Miss Demar knelt down by him.

"Gerard!" He only moaned and muttered. I thought she looked as sick as he, but she got fresh water in a ewer and bathed his hot forehead and parched lips. At length he drew a long sigh, turned on his side and fell asleep.

And then, to my astonishment, I recognized the man on the cliff, with the scar on his face.

I saw her, as he slept, softly stroke his disfigured cheek.

The physician came, prescribed and went away. M. Auxerre slept on, undisturbed. Miss Demar sent Varai to bed, and would have watched alone, but that I begged to stay with her.

Toward midnight I lay down on a couch; I was very sleepy. The clock struck twelve. I saw Miss Demar kneel in prayer at the foot of the Sudddenly there was a stir in the room. The great dog, who had lain under the table, came out and licked his master's hand. I saw that M. Auxerre's eyes were open.

"Mogul, old fellow, you have not left me!" he said, quietly.

Miss Demar started up. She came to the bedside. She crept close to the pillow and laid her cheek close to M. Auxerre's, as her arm stole around his neck.

"Elinor!" he whispered. "Darling!" she murmured. And LARGE WELL-VENTILATED ROOMS. that them two was born to be one you never, to your dying day, would have doubted, sir, had you seen them looking into each other's

THE MICROSCOPE

A careful microscopical maintain and chemical analysis of the urine, is a valuable aid in determining the nature of many chronic diseases, particularly those of the nervous system, blood, liver, kidneys, and bladder. These aids make it possible to treat such diseases successfully at a distance, without personal examination of the patient.
Thus Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Inflammation of the Bladder, Gravel, and other Diseases of the Urinary Organs are successfully treated; Nervous Debility, Exhaustion, Dropsy, Liver Disease, and many other Chronic Maladies are

The Troubles of Uncle Bob Saddler, the Conductor, and His Supposed Better Half.

Uncle Bob Saddler, who for a few months kept Hotel LeGrande in this city, and who for years ran a train on the Wabash road, is having not last. a little trouble with his gay and festive wife, as will be seen by the following Centralia correspondence in the Moberly Monitor of last evening:

Mrs. Saddler has for several years been in the habit of making sudden journeys, leaving without a moment's notice. Finally, it was noon the train of a certain well known Wabash conductor—a low, heavy set individual.

The culmination of the affair was wages and his temporary suspension. Next, a well known Centralia jeweler, W. H. Strother, became very intimate with Mrs. Saddler, and an assignment left him bankrupt, minus $1,200. With the loss of his money the intimacy ceased.

On the morning of the 11th of May he was seen about the union station, watching the incoming trains. On the evening of the same day he was again seen at the station. When the Wabash train arrived, Mrs. Saddler stepped off. She was encumbered with considerable baggage. Making her way to the waiting room, upstairs, she was met by the aforesaid business man and the two left the station.

Since that time Mrs. Saddler has not been at home, although Uncle Bob went to St. Louis and staid with her a week recently. It is said that Mrs. Saddier and the above mentioned business man went to Cincinnati, Indianapolis and other points.

After an absence of three or tour weeks, when the elopement was in everybody's mouth, and even the papers had published accounts of the affair, the business man suddenly returned to Centralia, denounced the whole thing as a lie, er, living in the Cherokee nation, and went around town threatening 50 miles southwest of that place. dire vengeance on all who had mentioned the affair. BE SUPPRESSED

In Stopping Disturbances the Soldie Will be Required to Shoot Down All Rioters.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 9.-President Cleveland has laid down explicit rules for the guidance of the army in dealing with mobs through the medium of the new army regulations which will soon be issued by the war department. The army has heretofore been without explicit orders in that respect.

President Cleveland believes that when troops are called out to face mobs they must subdue them even if it is necessary to mow them down with a storm of bullets. This is shown by the instructions given in the regulations. The status of the mob is defined as a public enemy, provided it is forcibly resisting or obstructing the execution of the laws of the United States or attempting to destroy property belonging to or under the protection of the United States. President Cleveland, Gen. Schofield and Secretary Lamont, with the assistance of the attorney general, laid down explicitly the rules under which troops should fire into a mob, and these have been incorporated in the regulations.

During the Chicago strike there was some hesitancy on the part of the regular troops as to when they should fire on the mob. well as an artist will be revived. Americans have suffered much at his hand in point of "talk" and extortion, but the majority have ever professed to be perfectly content as long as the Worth cachet was affixed to the inside belt of their gown. Mrs. Potter stood in Worth's best books. He has said in print that he would rather dress her than any American woman who ever came to his atelier in the Rue de la Paix. No dress ever left his shop costing less than two hundred dollars. One of the Worth stories that received credence a few years ago in the American colony was to the effect that a certain rich person went to him with a quantity of almost priceless lace to be used on a gown she desired to wear at a grand wedding. The dress came home in due season, and then the lady observed a change in the disposition of the lace that by no means pleased her. She could scarcely believe her own senses, and called in a friend who accompanied her at its final trying on, and left it, to her if the lace did not seem scant and quite different from its original arrangement. Assuredly. What could be the matter? In all haste the two women rushed off to interview the great man, only to be told he preferred the trimming as it was, and should not alter it! "But I had more lace than you have put on, Mr. Worth!" exclaimed the owner. "There were five-" "Madame!" interrupted the autocrat, "is not the dress beautiful?" And that was all the satisfaction the lady ever received. She threatened to go to law, but was deterred by the advice of friends who knew the dangers of invoking French justice where a question of dress-making was concerned. Mr. Worth professed to have unbounded love for antique laces, and

A Canine Presbyterian That Was a Shining Example for Less Punctual Church Members-Always a Participant in Family Worship.

There is more in a dog than is dreamt of by any philosophy of instinct. The father of the late Dr. Prime, editor of the New York Observer, was a sternly orthodox Presbyterian minister, one of the "old school." He owned a small, beautiful dog, named Fidelity, about whom there was something mysterious. and, though he never ventured to express the opinion that the dog had moral perceptions, his son believed that he thought so. Said Dr. Prime to a Chicago News reporter:

He differed from other dogs only in being better than others and in manifesting something that seemed like religious sensibility or a peculiar attachment to religious places, people and services. He attended family worship with a punctuality and regularity that other members of the household might well have imitated. and certainly did not surpass.

If a stranger were present-and much company visited our housethe dog's attention to him was regulated by his taking the lead or not in the religious worship of the household. If the visitor at my father's request conducted the worship, the dog at once attached himself to his person and when he departed the dog escorted him out of the village, sometimes going home with him to a neighboring town and making him a visit of a few days.

He remembered the evening and the place, and was always present. As it was not agreeable to have a dog at an evening meeting in a private house he was confined at home. The next week he went early before the family had thought to shut him up, and waited for the rest o' the day to study up a funeral hour and the people.

Watch on the Japs.

A novel method of rewarding the Japanese troops for their services in the war against China has been resolved upon by the Japanese government. Instead of being presented with medals, each soldier who has served in the campaign is to be given a watch, and the Japanese war office has just entered into contracts with several Swiss firms for a large supply of these timepieces. The presentation of the watches will be made by the mikado when he reviews his victorious troops at the close of the war. Germany's watch on the Rhine will not be in it with the watch on the Jap. - N. O. Picayune.

Chauncey's New Story.

Chnuncey M. Depew has a new story-one which he won't tell the next time he goes to Chicago. Here it is:

"There was once a prominent man in Chicago who, like all others out there, had a very exalted opinion of his town. He died and when he reached his eternal home he looked about him with much surprise, and the gate for him: 'Really, this does great credit to Chicago. I expected some change in Heaven.'

"The attendant eyed the Chicagoan a second and then observed: 'This isn't Heaven.' "-N. Y. Telegram.

LAFE JOHNSON'S JUMP.

A Wild Slide Down a Mountain Past Hostile Indians.

BY L. J. BATES.

In one of the western Indian outbreaks twenty years ago four men and a boy were besieged in a lonely silver mine. This mine was merely a lateral hole dug in the mountain side, with a rude pole shack or shanty near by, on a bit of more level ground. It was twenty-two miles from the nearest mining camp, where there was a cluster of shafts and forty or fifty men.

The party of five, thus weak and remote from help, were attacked by twenty or more Indians, who were repulsed with a loss of three warriors. Then the savages camped in a grove about a quarter of a mile down the mountain, and beside the

They counted upon killing whoever should attempt to leave the mine for the settlement, or come from the settlement to the mine. They knew that the miners had no large supply of provisions. They had their prey penned in a trap.

There was no way out for the miners except by the trail. Above the mine the mountain towered precipitously. Even if climbed, it would lead only into a wild region of peaks

In front of the mine the ground sloped steeply down into the broad, grassy valley of a mountain brook. Both above and below the mine the mountain flanks curved to the valley, with abrupt and impassable crags. As the slope in front was very steep, the trail ran diagonally down to the brook, along a natural check speed or stop, and to help in gutter made by the water of melting hill climbing. "I could start now and get through in the daylight, but it would give them a better chance to shoot. So I'll wait till dark. Going down this pitch, I shall fly by them like a bullet. They can only shoot while I'm coming and for a few seconds after I go by. They'll rush to the trail, but I'll turn off and go down the steep just this side of the grave."

"Why, boy, there's a straight ledge thirty feet high."

"No, the snowslides have gone over and filled it up below. It's only a drop of about six feet."

"But you'll be goin' like a shot and sail out so far that you'll fall twenty or thirty feet."

So sudden, swift, silent and surprising was his descent that the Indian watchers, though they had their rifles in hand, did not think to shoot until he was close upon them. Then one shot wide, another high, another a rod behind Lafe.

A dozen hastily snatched rifles, lower down, were preparing to fire when he should have turned the trail curve to give them nearly a straight aim. But Lafe whirled aside, sharply as a wheeling skater, and shot directly over the cliff. This threw the Indians all out; though, just as he sailed into the air four or five rifles spat fire, mostly without aim.

When Lafe took the leap he was going at a terrific speed, only slightly checked by his staff. He launched into the air standing erect, nicely poised, with every limb and muscle his lingering nephew to return to alert and limber.

"Good gracious sakes alive!" ejaculated Aunt Melissa Hobbs, trotting nimbly in with a big bottle of camphor and a yellow bowl of catnip tea. "Well, it's a real mercy, ain't it. that you happened to be out after mosses and found him in the woods; now, ain't it, Lillie?"

Herbert Melvin lay there and watched the young girl's graceful motions with languid interest. He even found himself observing the bow of blue ribbon on her neck and the azure belt which encircled her slender waist and wondering how her hands happened to be so white, and so remarkably small and well shaped. Of course, it was none of his business, but then he had nothing else to think about.

A low fever followed his fall, and so the pleasant autumn days went by, one by one, until nearly a month had elapsed before the doctor would allow Herbert to mount his horse again: but, contrary to his usual custom. Herbert took no exceptions to the Æsculapian flat, and resigned himself with marvelous philosophy to the seclusion of the sickroom.

Had they not for weeks lived a kind of fairy life, wandering together through the depths of the valley forest enjoying the beauties and glories of earth and sky?

Herbert Melvin sat musing before the fire one clear, sunshiny morning, when the door opened and the young lady with the black lashes and golden hair came in.

"That's the very reason I had wished to remain at home, uncle. 1 do not desire to become acquainted with the popular heiress."

"And why not, young man, I'd like to know?"

"Because, uncle, all the love I have to bestow is in the keeping of Lillie Dean, and as you wish to introduce me to Miss Colville as an aspirant for her hand and fortune, I think it well to forewarn you that it is utterly useless. I love Lillie Dean, and I intend to marry her."

"That's out of the question, recreant cavalier," said his hostess, gayy. "I have promised to bring you to her. Come!"

And she led him through one or two rooms to a little apartment, where a single gaslight shone softly through a pink glass shade. There was only one lady in the dimly-lighted room, and she stood by the mantel, her face half averted. "Miss Colville, Mr. Melvin," pronounced Mrs. Marchmont, in low, distinct tones, and vanished. The lady turned full toward him. Her cheeks flushed and her lips dimpled with half-repressed smiles.

"Herbert!" "Lillie!"

"But Lillie," said Herbert, after he had satisfied himself that the lovely vision in diamonds and white gauze was really the black-lashed beauty of the farmhouse, and that no deception had been practiced on his senses, "they told me you were Miss Colville."

"So I am; my name is Lillie Dean Colville."

"But how-"

"How did I happen to play Lillie Dean? I will tell you. Aunt Melissa is no relative, only my dear old nurse, and the freak seized me to go there last autumn instead of joining Mrs. Marchmont's party on a trip to California. I would not let Aunt Melissa tell you who I was, and accordingly ignored my last name, for I was so tired of being Miss Colville. Set that down as another freak if you like. Now, dear Herbert," she added, with a sudden change from arch independence to bashful penitence that was irresistibly charming, "you will not scold me for cheating you just a little? Indeed, I'll never be naughty again."

For answer, he only drew her W. S. EPPERSON. closer to his breast.

"I told you I was certain you would marry the heiress," said Lillie, saucily. "But you have avoided Miss Colville so completely that I began to be afraid I should never see you again."

Barton Melvin was considerably astonished when he came into the Teacher of Pianoforte room and found his nephew and the heiress on such excellent terms, but Languages: German and French. he soon comprehended matters with idents of Ridgewood, N. J. A daily spectacle at Ridgewood, N. J., is the passing of hundreds of crows over town. They come from the south in the early morning on the way to their feeding grounds, and return just at sunset to their regular roosting place. The other evening the crows were flying lazily along until suddenly it appeared that some enemy must have come among them, for what looked like a fierce battle began.

Instantly scores of birds that were well away from the center of disturbance turned about and were soon lost in the whirl of the supposed combatants. Some of the crows would drop nearly to the earth as if disabled, and then soar and apparently rest high in the air preparatory to a renewal of the excitement.

After a time it appeared as if many concluded discretion to be more praiseworthy than valor, or that the game was not worth the candle, and they left the scene in groups of ten or more and continued on their homeward way.

The battle, if such it was, was a terrific one. Nearly every crow that passed the tusseling ones returned for a few moments to watch the fray, but in hundreds of instances did not engage in it, but made a detour and soared away. - Washington Star.

A Treasured Nickel.

An ordinary five-cent piece is carefully treasured by Artist Frank Duckett, of Philadelphia, as a memento of Gen. Grant. Mr. Duckett came into possession of this memento in this way: One day several years ago, Mr. Duckett boarded a street car directly after a stout man, whose full brown beard and black slouch hat struck Mr. Duckett as familiar. A moment later he recognized his fellow-passenger as Gen. Grant, whom he had frequently seen during a sojourn at Washington several months previous. Mr. Duckett took a seat directly opposite the distinguished gentleman. The conductor came in to collect the fares. Mr. Duckett handed the conductor a dime, and at the same moment Gen. Grant gave the same official a nickel. The conductor turned the general's nickel over to Mr. Duckett and rang up the fares. Mr. Duckett carefully stowed his "change" away in a separate pocket and has cherished the coin ever since, because of its having been last used by the great soldierpresident.—Philadelphia Record.

The failing evesight of the queen regent of Spain is causing considerable alarm among her entourage. Her majesty was always-like all her family-shortsighted; but it is an accepted opinion that, as a rule, shortsighted people experience a gradual strengthening of their eyesight as they advance in years, and it is a well-known fact that in many instances shortsighted people in old age are not compelled to wear the glasses generally used by those advanced in years. The queen regent of Spain, however, has, during the past twelve months, experienced a

OUTRAGED AND CRUCIFIED.

Three Kentucky Toughs Add Fresh Horror to Fiendishness.

Louisville, Ky., July 9.—A special to the Courier-Journal from Ashland, Ky., says. A horrible story of outrage and murder comes from upper Blaine creek, Ellis county. A young girl named Jordan, while crossing a sketch of woods en route to the house of a neigher, was forcibly taken to a deserted house in the mountain and repeatedly assaulted by three young men who are all recognized as tough citizens. The fiends then choked the girl until they supposed she was dead, according to the repor received here, and placing her against the wall of the hut, with her arms extended, nailed her hands to the logs. The girl was discovered some time later by a searching party and recovered sufficiently to tell the names of her assailants. She died later, and the enraged people are hunting the murderers, who escaped to the mountains.

COLLECTION OF STAMPS.

The United States Trying Secure a Specimen of Every Issue.

The post office department has begun the collection of stamps of all the foreign countries of the world, as well as those of the United States. Capt. Brooks, superintendent of the foreign mail service, has two large stamp albums, containing places for every stamp issued, and makes requests of the various nations for a set of their stamps or specimens.

There are in all about 15,000 stamps issued, and up to date about 7,000 have been secured. A great difficulty in securing a complete set arises from the fact that certain principalities of Europe, now included in the domains of nations, continue the use of their individual stamps. For instance, says a Washington correspondent of the New York Times, Wurtemberg and Baden, in Germany, use the same their grand dukes. These pass only in the principalities named and are not good even over the rest of Germany. This fact causes much confusion, and extra expense to tourists traveling on the continent. If an American in Wurtemberg buys a stamp of that principality and mails it in Berlin, or even Wurtemberg, to anyone in America, the letter reaches its destination, but an extra charge of 10 cents is made before delivery.

A dozen years ago each department of the United States had a distinct issue of stamps, which, since the use of the penalty frank on envelopes, have to all appearances gone completely out of existence. Those that have not been destroyed have found their way in the hands of stamp dealers and stamp collectors. There are but few complete sets

THE COLLECTING MANIA. Just Now the Contemporary Poster is the Chief Attraction.

Anyone who has ever suffered at any time from the mania for collectng, in any of its forms, must feel it in these days a constant tax upon his powers of self-restraint to keep his hands off of the contemporary poster. The posters in particular with which some of the publishers announce-the new numbers of magazines, and sometimes new books, are a constant temptation. Anyone who has ever collected anything must feel that they are too fascinating to be neglected, and that not to gather them as they appear is a neglect of opportunity that is almost criminal.

For the solace of persons who have this impulse and refuse to yield to it, it is a pleasure to point out that, after all, the collector is a slave to his hobby, and the more things he collects the more masters he puts over himself. To be able to see pretty things, and not to be bitten with the desire to take them home and salt them down, even when they can be had for the asking, is an attainment which promises to be quite as valuble for its rarity as most of the things that ordinary collectors acquire. When we see the awful length to which the postage-stamp mania has gone, and the prodigious accumulations of photographs which Ever since the birth of her last overwhelm most contemporary faminot to drift into the habit of hoarding even pretty things that we do not really want. It is so easy to begin collecting, and so unsatisfactory at least—and maintain that not to be a collector is a distinction, just as it is not to have had one's picture in the newspapers.—Harper's Weekly.
